

ABSTRACT

A device for transmitting a message for reception by another device, comprising: a processor for adding location information to the message, before transmission, wherein 5 the location information identifies an area within which the message is to be hosted for reception by the other device; and a transmitter for transmitting the message, with the location information.

Fig. 2

10